

No wonder Americans don't trust their government. The government and its agencies are supposed to protect consumers fair use rights, not the entertainment industries misguided repeated attempts to limit these rights. Government involvement in the computer and electronics industries will stifle development and put us a step behind the rest of the world. When will you guys learn.